The Herald of His Grace

Presenting every man perfect in Christ Jesus. Colossians 1:28

Volume 41
Issue 1008

We Would Expect

by — Richard Jordan

If anyone had an excuse to be depressed and defeated by overwhelming circumstances and problems, it was Paul. After he had been condemned and almost assassinated in Israel, then experienced shipwreck in the Mediterranean, washing up on the small island of Malta, he found himself under arrest in the capital of the empire awaiting his trial before Caesar. Would he be executed? Left a prisoner? Released?

While in chains he wrote four letters,¹ which demonstrates that he never thought of himself as a prisoner of Rome! Instead, he saw himself as “the prisoner of Jesus Christ” – and what a wonderfully clear and convincing difference this made in his outlook.

We would expect a prisoner to say something like, “I am poor and miserable!” Yet Paul said to the Ephesians that he was rich and blessed with more blessings than he could even count (cf. Ephesians 1:3). This is the message of Ephesians!

We would expect a prisoner to say something like, “I am the most unhappy and discontented person in the whole world!” Yet Paul said to the Philippians that he could rejoice at all times and could be content in whatsoever state he was in, even when he was in prison (cf. Philippians 4:4). This is the message of Philippians!

We would expect a prisoner to say something like, “I am in desperate need. Life is terrible!” Yet Paul said to the Colossians that Christ was everything he needed; that Christ was his life (cf. Colossians 2:10; 3:4). This is the message of Colossians!

We would expect that if a believer were thrown into failure he might say, “Lord, I need to get out of here so that I can start serving you again!” Yet Paul served the Lord even during his time in bonds. He even preached the gospel to a runaway slave named Onesimus who became profitable to him in the ministry. This is the message of Philemon!

The grace of the Living God had captured Paul. Has it captured you? The victory that is in the Christ-life does not ignore problem situations nor default on any responsibilities we may have to make things better. Rather it conveys the note of living in the reality of our current identity in Christ, no matter what the situations and circumstances of life bring our way.

... I have learned, in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content (Philippians 4:11).

Giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ (Ephesians 5:20). BSN

God Has NO Equals

Bible Student's Courses

Course 1: GOD / Unit 4 - The Sovereignty of God / Lesson 3 - God's Sovereignty – God Has NO Equals

by — Mark D. Vogt

To whom will you liken Me, and make Me equal, and compare Me, and we shall be alike? (Isaiah 46:5).

Key Points:

The disrespect, ignorance and hostility displayed by most of humanity toward God in no way lessens the passionate love that Father has for His creation. 8485

There is no tug of war between good and evil, God and Satan.....8485

The disrespect, ignorance and hostility displayed by most of humanity toward God in no way lessens the passionate love that Father has for His creation. The God of the Scriptures is not like religions' gods who demand a certain level of performance in order that the particular god would show favor toward the supplicant.

This is true of all religions, whether they be "Christian" or pagan. Such disrespect and hostility are manifested by the doctrines and teachings which seek to elevate man and diminish God.

who change the truth of God into a falsehood, and honor and serve the creature rather than the Creator ... (Romans 1:25, YLT).

Yet, in reality, God has no equals. None.

In Isaiah 45:6, God plainly declares, there is no one apart from Me; I am Yahweh, and there is no other (CV).

So, there are no competing forces in the universe trying to see who "wins." How could there be?

For out of Him, and through Him, and to Him is all: to Whom be majesty for the ages. Amen (Romans 11:36, BSV).

Therefore, there is no tug of war between good and evil, God and Satan, determining who is finally going to rule all of creation. That contest simply does not exist. God rules and there is no other force, or supposed deity, to challenge Him. After all, even Satan, as well as any other being, is a servant of God and does God's bidding.

My Story

"We also believe, and therefore speak." Testimonies of Believers #12

Danny Hutcherson's Spiritual Journey

(as interviewed by Steve Martin)

From Confusion to Clarity

Young Danny Hutcherson's life took a turn towards faith when he was eight. His mother began attending Bethel Baptist Church. This decision introduced Danny to a world of religious beliefs and practices that would shape his life. The first Sunday his mother attended Bethel Baptist marked a pivotal moment in their family's life.

Upon returning from church, she knelt before Danny, her eyes shining with a newfound belief, and exclaimed, "Danny, your mama just got saved." Young Danny, puzzled and unfamiliar with the concept of being "saved," couldn't grasp what this transformation meant for his mother and their family.

When Danny was about 10 years old, he went to a church camp. There, he decided to "walk down the aisle" and get baptized. To be honest, Danny thought it would be fun to do. He didn't really understand what baptism meant, and nobody had taken the time to explain it to him.

The church he was attending was very strict, focusing a lot on preaching about sin and hell, which lasted about an hour and a half each service. "There was so much focus on hell, I'm surprised it took me until the age of 10 to get 'saved.' It's a wonder I didn't do it the first Sunday."

Teenage years brought turmoil. Bethel Baptist School, started by the church, became a battleground of strict rules. Danny, now experimenting with typical teenage rebellions like smoking, found himself expelled for breaking these rules. However, it was during this tumultuous time at the school that Danny met a significant person in his life – his future wife. This brief but fateful encounter would later bloom into a lifelong partnership.

At sixteen, Danny's family moved to a Southern Baptist church, offering a more nurturing environment. The preacher, a calm yet eventually more assertive figure, provided a new angle on faith that resonated with Danny.

As an adult Danny returned to Bethel Baptist. Surrounded by old friends, he felt a divine "call to preach," leading him to enroll in Bethel Baptist Bible college. His initial foray into preaching was marked by self-doubt and inexperience. Years later Danny rediscovered his "calling" at a local Southern Baptist church. He pursued this path at Mid-America Baptist Theological Seminary in Memphis, firmly stepping into his role as a preacher.

Danny's journey was not without its trials. He faced the typical struggles of church life, especially in small country churches, where regulations and disagreements were common. Despite these challenges he persevered, leading a small church called Antioch Baptist Church. Under his guidance the church flourished, growing from a mere 18 members to a congregation of nearly 200, eventually building a new church to accommodate the growing flock. "As time went on, everything seemed to be moving forward smoothly but, internally, I was struggling. I felt truly miserable, to the point where I was considering giving up on everything," Danny said.

A LIFE-CHANGING DISCOVERY

One day, while watching TV, Danny stumbled upon a YouTube message that would alter the course of his life. The speaker was James Devney, a name Danny had never heard before. Devney introduced concepts that were entirely new to Danny, such as "rightly dividing" and the idea of two different gospels. These ideas were so foreign to Danny that he had never encountered them during his time in seminary. Intrigued and a bit shaken, Danny called his wife to listen to the message. Devney spoke about the irrelevance of baptism in modern times and the existence of two distinct gospels. Danny was perplexed and turned to his wife, questioning if everything he had believed and taught as a Southern Baptist might be wrong. His wife, equally uncertain, could only admit that there might be more to their faith than they had realized.

FACING THE CONGREGATION

The next step for Danny was daunting. He stood before his congregation, filled with apprehension, and confessed that some of his teachings might have been misguided. He admitted his ignorance, but the reaction was explosive. The congregation was so upset that the local police had to intervene to ensure Danny's safety. As a result of this revelation, the church that Danny had built began to crumble. The following Sunday nearly three-quarters of the congregation walked out, distressed over the new perspective on baptism. Danny hadn't even begun to address other controversial beliefs, such as the concept of universal forgiveness through Jesus's sacrifice and the non-existence of a burning hell.

The congregation dwindled to a handful of followers, leaving Danny with the original, small church that had stood for a hundred years. About 40 to 50 people initially stayed, but even they faced immense pressure. In the small town, their allegiance to Danny's church could cost some of them their jobs, as they were threatened with termination if they continued to attend. Danny found himself leading a church unlike any other. With only 15 to 20 people gathering each Sunday, their meetings were simple yet meaningful. They sang a few songs, and Danny shared his teachings. There was no children's ministry, no grand organizational structure, just a small group of faithful followers supporting Danny in his older years with offerings of love.

EXPLORING NEW TRUTHS

After five years of exploring the concept of "rightly dividing" the Scripture, Danny faced a surprising truth: even among those who shared his beliefs there was disagreement and confusion. His journey of faith took a new turn when he confronted the doctrine of hell and began to question it, a move that initially seemed too radical to accept. Danny addressed his small congregation, focusing on the challenging issue of hell. He asked them to consider a crucial point. "Think about it, guys," he said. "Jesus taught us to forgive others, no matter what they have done to us, no matter the hurt or abuse. He said to forgive not just seven times, but seventy times seven, to be perfect like our Father in heaven." Then Danny posed a thought-provoking question, urging them to use their common sense. "Do you really think God would ask this of us, to forgive endlessly, yet He would send His enemies to hell?" he questioned. "That just doesn't make sense in everyday life." This query highlighted a stark contrast in the teachings and prompted his congregation to think deeply about the nature of forgiveness and divine justice.

Danny shared with his congregation a significant shift in his approach to the Bible. He explained that he was gently guiding them away from solely relying on the King James Version to exploring the Concordant

100 Scriptural Proofs that Jesus Christ Is the Savior of All and 150 Reasons for Believing in the Final Salvation of All Mankind

by — Thomas Whittemore & Erasmus Manford

This reprint of two historical works from the 19th century examines Scripture passages taking the reader through a logical train of thought proving universal reconciliation.

Version. "You all know how firmly I believed in the King James Bible," he said. "I used to proclaim it as the ultimate truth, the only Word of God, dismissing all other versions as false. I'm still learning, and I realize now that the King James Version has its flaws."

Danny then illustrated his point by discussing the translation of the word "hell" in the Bible. "They've used 'hell' to translate three different words: Gehenna, Hades and Tartarus. It's not accurate to use the same English word for three distinct terms." This revelation was part of Danny's ongoing journey in seeking deeper understanding and truth in his faith.

Danny's honesty with his congregation was key. He admitted his past misunderstandings and embarked on a path to uncover deeper truths. He gradually introduced his followers to new interpretations of Scripture, including the ideas that there is no burning hell, and that free will is an illusion. This journey was not without its struggles, but his small congregation remained loyal, growing together in understanding. Danny encouraged open discussion, even during his teachings, embracing a more interactive and relaxed environment.

Driven by a thirst for truth, Danny delved into teachings from various sources like Martin Zender and Clyde Pilkington, exploring doctrines that went beyond traditional interpretations. He introduced these teachings to his congregation, always emphasizing the importance of an open mind and a willingness to question and learn. Over time, the church transformed into a community of trust and exploration. The members, initially struggling with new ideas, gradually found peace and understanding. They learned to embrace a God Who was loving and forgiving, moving away from the fear of eternal punishment.

Danny feels a bit embarrassed about how he used to conduct communion services. He would stand before the congregation, and he would ask them to bow their heads. He gave them two minutes to reconcile with God before they partook in communion. In those moments, he urged them to recall every sin they had committed in the last quarter, warning them of the severe consequences if they missed even one. Looking back, Danny realizes the absurdity of this practice. "God never punished anyone during those communions, despite my stern warnings," he said. Moreover, he acknowledges the impossibility of remembering every sin committed over such a period, and the fact that no one ever faced dire consequences for forgetting.

FIND JOY AND PURPOSE IN THE JOURNEY

Danny reflected on his current place in his faith journey with a sense of acceptance and purpose. He acknowledged that not everything taught in mainstream Christianity was wrong, citing teachings on building a good marriage as beneficial. However, he felt that when it came to major doctrinal issues, "They miss it on everything. That's where I stand now," he shared, content with living out his days leading his small church in the countryside. He believed he was exactly where God intended him to be, despite the challenges and criticisms. Most of the wider church community didn't understand his views, leading them to label him harshly as a false prophet or a "snake oil preacher." Yet, Danny found solace and purpose in his little group of followers, guiding them in a way he felt was true to his understanding of God's word.

Now 67, Danny looks back at his journey with a sense of fulfillment. He recognizes that his path was unconventional, often leading to criticism and misunderstanding from the broader church community. Yet, he finds joy and purpose in leading his small group, dedicated to exploring the depths of their faith with open hearts and minds. BSN

Matthew 4:19

And He saith unto them, "Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men" (KJV).

Q: When Jesus said, "Follow Me and I will make you fishers of men," doesn't that imply that some "fish" will not be caught?

A: According to the ordinary line of thought – yes – many would take it that way. Their conclusion is that some will be permanently lost. This is the way the ordinary religious mind reasons, and that mindset is always wrong on scriptural matters.

The truth is, some will indeed be lost, but only until the consummation of the ages (eons; Greek, aiōns). Yet in the end, God shall be "All in all," not "All in some."

Thereafter the consummation, whenever He may be giving up the kingdom to His God and Father, whenever He should be nullifying all sovereignty and all authority and power. For He must be reigning until He should be placing all His enemies under His feet. The last enemy is being abolished: death. For He subjects all under His feet. Now whenever He may be saying that all is subject, it is evident that it is outside of Him Who subjects all to Him. Now, whenever all may be subjected to Him, then the Son Himself also shall be subjected to Him Who subjects all to Him, that God may be All in all. (I Corinthians 15:24-28).

Death is the traveling companion of mortality. Always has been. However, death shall be destroyed at the consummation.

The last enemy is being abolished: death (:26).

Death will be more than simply destroyed. At the consummation, mortality shall be swallowed up of life!

For we also, who are in the tabernacle, are groaning, being burdened, on which we are not wanting to be stripped, but to be dressed, that the mortal may be swallowed up by life (II Corinthians 5:4).

This means that all of the remaining dead, without exception, will at that time be made alive and changed to immortals. Yes, ALL!

God loses no one! As all will eventually see, the life, death and resurrection of Jesus Christ has absolute efficacy!

And through Him to reconcile all to Him (making peace through the blood of His cross), through Him, whether those on the Earth or those in the Heavens (Colossians 1:20).

This is hard for many to believe and accept, but it is true: the Scriptures are quite clear on it. This is what we mean when we speak of the salvation of all: universal salvation.

The Seven Administrations: The Basic Dispensations of Scripture

by — Clyde L. Pilkington, Jr.

Throughout Scripture we are presented with various administrations. These administrations, sometimes called “dispensations,” or “economies,” are divine managements, stewardships or households. They are the organization and implementation of a specific divine purpose.

See order form under “Clyde Pilkington.”

This is an introductory look at the seven basic administrations in Scripture. Grasping the overall scope of these will greatly assist us in understanding the Scriptures. Such an awareness of our place in the Divine plan can save us from much confusion, heartache and despair. Extensive endnotes. Overview chart.

Dear Friends,

We are thrilled to invite you to an enriching and spiritually uplifting weekend at the Pennsylvania Scripture Conference, set to take place on March 23-24, 2024. This event promises to be a remarkable journey of faith, fellowship and deeper understanding.

“Truthing in Love”

A Weekend of Study & Fellowship

But truthing in love, we should grow up unto Him in all, Who is the Head, Christ (Ephesians 4:15, LET).
